Unable to pay your phone or Broadband bill?
The Lifeline Program Helps You to Stay Connected

Chicago, IL…Staying connected to local emergency services and community resources is vital for all residents, and potentially saves lives. The Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC) is joining the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners (NARUC) and the Universal Telephone Assistance Corporation (UTAC) to raise awareness about the Lifeline Program which helps those who need voice and broadband services but can’t afford it. The National Telephone Discount Lifeline Awareness Week is September 9-13, 2019.

“Whether it’s looking for a job, accessing health care services, connecting with family or calling for help in an emergency, having access to voice and broadband service is a necessity, but financially out of reach for some families. The Lifeline Program can help by providing eligible low-income customers with a discount on monthly voice and broadband bills,” said Carrie Zalewski, Chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission.

Under the federal Lifeline Program, low-income consumers who participate in certain public assistance and veterans’ pension programs or who qualify based on income can receive a discount of up to $9.25 per month off their monthly bill for phone, broadband, or bundled phone and broadband service.

For the first time, the Lifeline Program in 2019 is focusing more on access to broadband services. A new requirement for Lifeline participants is to recertify every year.

UTAC is a not-for-profit corporation which oversees the Universal Telephone Assistance Program (“UTSAP”) in Illinois, which promotes the Lifeline program in Illinois and provides a subsidy toward the cost of installing a new phone or broadband connection for wireline subscribers. To learn more about the Lifeline Program, or to see if you qualify, visit the UTAC website at http://linkupillinois.org/.

To apply for benefits, contact your local participating telecommunications provider.
