I am writing in regard to the ATXI transmission line. After reading and reviewing Ameran's proposal it seems to me the proposed route is to provide power to the citizens of Illinois and Indiana in the most feasible and economic way possible. The proposed route isn't one of getting power from Quincy to Terre Haute in the straightest line possible. It is a utilitarian matter of providing it to the areas with the most need now and to meet future needs. Anywhere one goes afoot Native American artifacts abound. Pasture fences are broken down by deer traveling from one area to another and so on and so on. One can counter their arguments and also apply them to all rural areas of the state. It is apparent the Errata filing of the Moultrie County Property owners, regardless of rationale provided, is stating they just don't want a transmission line through their county. I pray the court take this to mind while deliberating. To quote Jeremy Bentham " The greatest good of the greatest number should be the purpose of human conduct"
