Managerial Qualifications
[Section 454.60]

Zentility is led by seasoned professionals whose work experiences have prepared them to operate their energy management software business competently and responsibly.

The company's President and CEO, Ryan Peusch, learned his managerial and technical skills from a decade of complex electricity sales experience with America's largest public utility, interacting daily with his sales team and the utility's largest commercial and industrial companies. He learned how to build lasting customer satisfaction through fair and ethical business practices. He started Zentility in order to bring more efficient, fairer, and less expensive service to business electricity customers than they are now receiving from many electricity brokers.

Kyle Nicholson has wide experience with start-up companies and investment projects with others and with his family's extensive health care facility projects.

Andrew Twomey honed his management skills with a leading electrical distributor and with his own company specializing in sales and use tax recovery services.

The senior advisor to the company on strategy and regulatory compliance is James Cawley who served for many years as a commissioner and chairman of one of the largest public utility regulatory bodies in the nation beginning in the early 1980's and ending in 2015, interspersed with twenty years of law practice as counsel to several public utilities and competitive electric, gas, and telephone suppliers.

These individuals take seriously their responsibilities under Illinois law and the Illinois Commerce Commission's regulations, and undertake to do so with the necessary managerial competence and dedication to their customers' best interests.

Ryan Peusch

Ryan Peusch is energy veteran with over 10 years of energy knowledge and expertise. Before starting HomeADE, LLC, Peusch was a successful Business Development Manager working for Constellation Energy before and after it merged with Exelon, the largest energy company in the United States. He was responsible for bringing new, highly technical energy products to market, and developed lasting relationships with customers. He has a highly technical background in high-level energy sales, having dealt with Fortune 500 companies on a regular basis.

- High level of product, and industry knowledge, having helped to drive a consistent level of sales excellence for his sales team. He has performed at a high level in the energy industry for over 10 years.
- At Constellation Energy, Peusch sold a variety of technical solutions, including electricity, natural gas, solar, energy efficiency, and demand response products, to high-level, market-leading companies.
- Peusch is highly trained on cutting edge energy products and services.
- At Exelon, Peusch brought to market new technologies with the implementation of new energy software systems in large commercial real estate organizations in the District of Columbia. He helped to increase customer retention, and he enabled customers to better manage their facilities, which resulted in increased profitability.
- Peusch managed an extensive territory: MD, PA, DC, CT, NY, IL, TX, and NJ. Within this territory, Peusch helped to increase Exelon (Constellation Energy) brand awareness and provided value to all of his customers.

Overall, Peusch dedicated himself while at Exelon (Constellation Energy) to bringing transparent energy solutions to his customers at all times. He realized that the energy market was full of people who did not have their customers' best interest in mind, and he set out to help his customers to manage their costs and risks down over time. His goal with Zentility is the same.

[Section 454.60]

James H. Cawley

James H. Cawley is a 1967 graduate of St. Bonaventure University and a 1970 graduate of Notre Dame Law School. He began his legal career in 1970 as one of the seven original law clerks serving the judges of the newly-created Commonwealth Court of Pennsylvania. He was later appointed Majority Counsel to the Pennsylvania Senate Consumer Affairs Committee where he drafted several major amendments to Pennsylvania's public utility laws and assisted with codification of those laws. In 1977, he was appointed Chief Counsel to the Senate Majority Floor Leader. Thereafter, he was twice nominated and confirmed as a member of the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission, serving from November 1979 until September 1985. He then practiced law with a concentration on administrative law and appellate practice. His clients included a wide array of public utilities and competitive telephone, electric and natural gas providers.

He has been Adjunct Professor of Administrative Law at Widener University School of Law since 1994. In 2009, he received the school's Adjunct Faculty Distinguished Service Award. For many years, he has been a faculty member of Pennsylvania Bar Institute courses on appellate advocacy, public utility law and ethics. He recently (2016) was honored by his administrative law peers with the James S. Bowman Award given by the Pennsylvania Bar Association's Administrative Law Section for lifetime excellence in administrative law and for mentoring younger members of the bar.

Cawley returned to the Commission in June, 2005, serving as both Vice Chairman and Chairman overseeing the independent agency with a $75 million annual budget and 500 employees located in four locations throughout Pennsylvania. He received an additional term that ended when his successor took office on September 30, 2015.

On January 27, 2010, he was appointed by the Federal Communications Commission to serve as one of the four state utility regulators on the Federal-State Joint Board for Universal Service created by Congress in 1996 to ensure the availability of telecommunications services throughout the nation. He was elected State Chairman of the Board in January 2011, and reappointed to the Board in July 2013. He resigned coincident with the end of his Pa. Public Utility Commission term.

Cawley became Zentility's Director of Strategy and Regulatory Compliance in March, 2016.

Occupational Background Information
[Section 454.60]

Kyle Nicholson

Kyle Nicholson is Zentility's Senior Vice President of Business Development.

Since graduating from George Washington University with a BA in Entrepreneurship and Marketing, Nicholson has been involved in start-ups and investment projects throughout a wide variety of industries, from Internet technology to Special Education Services.

Prior to joining Zentility, he operated a Sales and Use Tax Recovery firm and served as a managing partner at a lighting retrofit company that helped its customers benefit from energy savings achieved by upgrading their facilities to more energy efficient lighting.

He continues his oversight of a number of early stage investments for a small family-owned investment firm.

Andrew Twomey

Andrew Twomey is an entrepreneur specializing in the electrical industry. He attended Lebanon Valley College and received a degree in Business Management. His post college career includes experience as a management level employee at Consolidated Electrical Distributors, one of the largest electrical distributors in the United States, where he spent eight years gaining experience and knowledge in the electrical field.

In 2012, he founded Welkin Consultants, which specializes in sales and use tax recovery services and commercial energy brokerage.

ATTACHMENT F
Technical Qualifications
[Section 454.70]

Because Zentility is a software application-based business, a high degree of computer software programming proficiency lies at the heart of its operation. The individuals possessing this competency have many years of experience creating the kind of software that drives Zentility. Over the past two years, they have used their skills to create a unique, patent-pending application that is capable of revolutionizing the brokerage and management of electricity.

The key senior advisor for this technical effort, Joseph Patanella, has nearly 20 years of experience with sensitive federal computer security responsibilities, combined afterward with the creation in the private sector of a highly successful information security company.

This combination of technical competence, informed by Joseph Patanella's intimate knowledge of necessary security measures and Ryan Peusch's inside knowledge of the inner workings of the sale of electricity to major end users, has produced a new standard for the purchase and management of electricity.

ATTACHMENT G
Occupational Information
[Section 454.70]

Craig Tobe

Craig Tobe is Zentility's Chief Technology Officer and senior architect specializing in developing and scaling client/server applications. He has contributed to the success of major applications at companies like eBay, Constant Contact, FINRA, NPR, American Red Cross, and many others across the finance, e-commerce, marketing, and media sectors. He has been writing software for energy software companies for many years.

Patrick Newell

Patrick Newell is the Vice President of Product Development for Zentility. He brings over 10 years of experience in enterprise software development across a variety of industries. His responsibilities include product delivery, development team management, and IT operations.

Joseph Patanella

Joseph Patanella is a key advisor to Zentility based on his 18 years as a technologist with the National Security Agency (NSA) and entrepreneurial business experience throughout his federal government career. He founded TrustWave, a leading information security company in 1998, and grew it to over 300 employees and $60 million in annual revenue. The company was acquired earlier this year by Singapore Communications.
